

Another one down...

Published: January 15, 2026, 2:12 am

The Guardian has reported:

The government was accused of losing another favoured banker yesterday as the Treasury prepared to advertise for a new chairman for UK Financial Investments, the body set up to look after £37bn of taxpayer funds invested in bailed-out banks.

The role is currently held by Glen Moreno, who was revealed to be a trustee of Liechtenstein Global Trust (LGT), a private bank accused of aiding tax evasion. Moreno is not thought to be applying for the advertised post.

Looks like we're making progress. That's two in two days.

Who next?