According to a press release in my inbox the Prime Minister said this morning:

"I believe, as a society, we should support hard work, effort, enterprise and responsible risk-taking. We should not in any way condone, but should punish irresponsible and excessive risk-taking."

"The old short-term bonus culture is gone; that there are no rewards for failure, but penalties for failure; that in the future there must be rewards for success - but long-term sustainable success and not just short-term gains."

So that's why you appointed Sir David Walker and Greg Moreno was it? It looks to me like they've got the most massive rewards for failure.

Rhetoric is not enough Gordon.

We want to see real action.
