As only one reader of this blog knows, I had reason to yesterday say that I was aware of the good fortune that there is food on my table: that I can provide for my children.

And then in response to my blog on accountants and the good they could do a link to a short film was posted. Please watch it.

Then muse on the fact that it is very largely an accident of birth that means you're not in the position of those parents.

And then reflect on whether it's worth beating the tax evasion and avoidance through transfer mispricing that accountants facilitate, at least in part through tax havens. Ending it could eliminate this misery for good.

PS And if cynics say it's all staged I'll quietly weep — do you really think this does not happen?
