From the Independent:

In a move that appeared to be timed to coincide with pressure by President Nicolas Sarkozy for a G20 agreement on curbs for offshore tax havens, the French government has demanded tax fraud investigations into bank accounts allegedly held in Liechtenstein by Michelin, Total and Adidas.

They were apparently on the Liechtenstein list.

They deny it all.

They always do.

But it doesn't mean they don't do it.

And it's why tax havens must go. And why the G20 starting this process is so important.
