Bizarre article from the Mail on Sunday:

Revenue & Customs investigators are training their sights on the middle classes as part of a crackdown on tax evasion.

They plan to prosecute anyone who fails to own up by the end of this month to earning money in an offshore bank account.

A special 20-strong team is being put together to investigate suspicious cases and identify tens of thousands of people thought to be using tax havens to evade the Revenue.

What are they trying to say? Only prosecute the working class who commit what they call 'benefit fraud' whilst leaving alone those middle class who tax evade?

It's hard to find another interpretation.

And that, to misquote the Taxpayer's Alliance is "outrageous".
