

When will Jersey realise zero ten is dead?

Jersey â€šÃ„Ã²will have a level playing field over zero-ten&rsquo;; →<sup>a</sup> Business →<sup>a</sup> This Is Jersey.

It's reported that:

The president of the Jersey Society of Chartered Certified Accountants, Wendy Dorman, said she believed it was inconceivable that the Ecofin Code of Conduct group would allow a zero-ten structure in one island but not in the other Crown dependencies.

Let's get this straight: Jersey's zero ten has never been considered by Europe (Ecofin). Nor will it ever be because the UK won't put it forward because it's agreed it's not compliant.

The Isle of Man has been considered and knocked back once.

It's not guaranteed it will survive another scrutiny.

So zero ten is dead. Buried. Gone.

But Jersey does not like realities.

Then, since offshore is a world of make believe that things happen where they clearly do not that's not surprising.
