The Treasury reports:

Chancellor George Osborne has confirmed that an emergency Budget will be held on Tuesday 22 June.

Speaking to journalists at the Treasury's offices in London, Mr Osborne said he wanted an emergency Budget that would "show that Britain can live within its means and...provide the solid foundation for a private sector recovery."

So, he's promoting a crisis when there isn't one and a solution that is not credible.

That's fiscal responsibility, Tory style.
