

The editor's decision is final

Some of the trolls who seek to comment here have developed a new habit.

I make the decision to delete their post so they resubmit time, after time, after time.

They may. I guess they think they're wasting my time.

But actually all I have to do is note who does it and delete all their submissions forever more.

The editor's decision is final.

And there's a certain pleasure in thinking you're waiting a lot more effort than I am in the spending the fraction of a second it takes to hit delete - or to consign you to the spam bin.
