As Music Week reports:

The Federation of Small Businesses has lent its support to the campaign to bring an end to Low Value Consignment Relief, a tax mechanism that indie music retailers say puts them at a disadvantage to the online operators.

The organisation's national policy chairman Mike Cherry has written to the EC's directorate general for taxation and customs union on behalf of the FSB's 213,000 members in the UK outlining why the EC must act on the issue.

Good for them.

This is about creating a level playing field.
