The G20 Finance Ministers and Central Bank Governors met a week or so ago - and as I was distracted I did not notice.

In their final communique they said:

We agreed to maintain momentum for action to tackle non-cooperative jurisdictions and to fully implement the G20 anti-corruption action plan. We asked the Global Forum to report to us on ways to improve the effectiveness of exchange of tax information.

If they're serious I let's recognise the fact that tax information exchange agreements do not work.

And then just say the bleeding obvious - which is that automatic information exchange is the solution. For the simplest option available to ensure that the smoking gun every tax authority needs to open an investigation is available to them, see here.

In summary: stop prevaricating and please deliver. Now.
