

Blogging purdah

Having just put up several blogs before 8am it seems odd to say I might be going into blogging purdah, but needs must.

The Courageous State - my book to be published in September - is making good progress. 37,000 words are now done and the project is a month old. Those words are already being edited by the publisher, but that still leaves 23,000 plus to do - and some of the toughest to write at that.

So blogging may be a bit on the thin side for the next week or so whilst I focus on cracking on with that. Even I'm beginning to think a book of this scale might be ambitious in six weeks or so.
