I well remember when George Osborne said if only the UK was more like Ireland all its problems would be solved. Oh for the heady days of 2006, eh, George? When you wrote in The Times of the “Irish miracle” that “stands as a shining example of the art of the possible in long-term economic policymaking”.

Think what a mess we'd be in now if George had been in charge then.

And remember that tomorrow when George blames everyone but himself for the mess he's made now he's in charge here.
