There's a good article under the above title in the Telegraph today, and not just because I'm quoted.

As they say:

Tax collectors, according to more than one person interviewed for this article, are heroes. After all, the people they are targeting — tax avoiders (people who legally exploit loopholes) and tax evaders (those who commit tax fraud) – are not exactly popular in the current climate, when the majority of the population is having to endure tax rises and wage freezes to help the country balance its books.

And I agree.
