As the Eastern Daily Press notes today:

Opposition to the unpopular Health and Social Care Bill is at an all-time high, with more and more health professionals, unions and organisations voicing their concerns over the plans.

King's Lynn and District Trades' Council is arranging a public meeting to oppose the Bill on Friday, March 2, at 7pm in King's Lynn Town Hall on the Saturday Market Place.

The Norfolk and Waveney mental health branch of Unison has also organised a rally, to be held in Hay Hill in Norwich on Saturday from 11am to midday.

Both rallies will feature various speakers, including Richard Murphy, a founder of The National Tax Justice Network.

See you there is you're in the vicinity.
