

Normal service will be resumed...

There may be erratic blog posting and comment moderation over the next day or two.

My wife went into hospital yesterday. It's only appendicitis - and she hasn't been operated on yet (but is in a green gown right now).

But it does mean I have some other things to think about and hope you'll understand - even on a day when tax avoidance is much in the news.

But let me repeat a point I made on Twitter yesterday - at times like this you realise just how important the NHS is. All I need to think about is her (and child care). I have no need to worry about whether we can afford whatever is required.

That's why I fight for the NHS.
