

On comments, and other things

I am suffering a barrage of advice at the moment, all of which says I should work less.

I tend to agree.

Having reflected on this one obvious way to cut out some work is to get rid of all the comments that are posted here in contravention of the comments policy.

So please note if you're just trying to support neoliberalism, tax avoiders, offshore and austerity you will be deleted, and most especially so if you have been doing so persistently. The same will be true of those who say for the umpteenth time that land value tax solves all problems. And it will also be true for those who I know abuse me elsewhere. Life's too short for all of that.

Those persistent few involved, please take note. Just go and spend your time on the Telegraph blog. They may appreciate you there.
