Interesting stuff from Accountancy Age this morning:

Protestors were justified in gate-crashing an event at New College, Oxford, at which former HM Revenue & Customs head Dave Hartnett was speaking, according to respondents to an Accountancy Age poll.

Of the 112 responses, some 92% said the action taken by the WeAreIntuders protesters was completely reasonable, compared to the 1% who felt it was fair to some extent. About 3% felt the action was unfair, while 4% said it was entirely unwarranted.

So even the professions own rag thinks the protests were justified.

Times, they are a'changing.
