

So what's going to be on Question Time tonight?

Published: January 13, 2026, 3:46 am

I am the 'Extra Guest' on BBC's Question Time tonight. That does not mean you will see me on the panel on television - it means I am given the BBC's twitter account for an hour. If you want to see what I have to say you have to follow @BBCExtraGuest on twitter.

The question I have now is what is going to be on? It's wise to prepare oneself.

Immigration is inevitable - and yes I've read Yvette Cooper this morning.

Is Serco and the NHS privatisation likely?

What about Vince Cable u-turning?

There's always the EU - especially as it's coming from Dover.

And is Syria a cert given we're sending some old tanks?

Will the bedroom tax feature?

What about privatising RBS (unlikely, I think)?

It's been announced today that lone parent rates are up threefold in 40 years - could that be linked to social housing?

Suggestions welcome.....

Oh, and anything anyone wants to suggest about what I say about Melanie Phillips? Keep it polite please...this will be on the BBC.
