

Funding the Future

Isn't it time we said that the world's major banks were...

Published: January 13, 2026, 10:10 am

This comes from one of this morning's FT emails:

Isn't it just time we recognised that the world's major banks were systemically corrupt? Why not say it? It seems glaringly obviously true and to admit it would then let us go forward in ways where we did not have to still presume that they are the masters of universe - which very clearly they have no right to be.