It is some indication of the times we live in that by far the best read article on the blog yesterday was the one mentioning that there were interesting jobs available right now.

That may of course be that it was not the best day of blogging I've ever done - I accept that possibility.

But I think it may be that we live in times where work of any type, let alone interesting work, is hard to find.

And that's a sad indictment of our society and a true measure of poverty behind the veneer of prosperity that the country still tries to adopt.
