

Funding the Future

Article URL

Published: January 12, 2026, 6:27 pm

---

The Guardian has published an interesting world map ranking countries based on the Gini coefficients. This measures inequality: the higher the score the more unequal the spread in the country in question. Grey means no data. Yellow is low inequality. Dark green is a high score:

Now ask yourself a simple question. Where would you rather live? In a more or less equal society? Any why?

What does that say about what you want?