

The case for a Green New Deal is unanswerable

Published: January 14, 2026, 7:14 am

New research, reported by the Guardian this morning, has shown that if climate change is to be curtailed then most of the already identified fossil fuel reserves of the world must remain in the ground. A chart they publish looks like this:

The fact is that the case for a Green New Deal is now unanswerable.

What is absurd is that this issue will be largely ignored in the forthcoming election when it is of such significance to us all.