

HMRC is under resourced - and it's accountants saying s...

Published: January 14, 2026, 9:24 am

Accountancy Age reported late last week that:

A poll of 73 Accountancy Age readers found that ... the majority of respondents felt the taxman had been held back by resource cuts.

*Around half said resource cuts had hamstrung its ability to deliver an adequate service, a view that mirrors comments made by former PAC chair Margaret Hodge to sister title Financial Director.*

Now I admit 73 is a small sample, and it was self selected so that this is not scientific in any way, but I still think this is significant.

I have long argued that HMRC is under-resourced. It's good to see the profession agreeing.

What about change, Mr Osborne?