

This week

As regular readers here are aware I tend to blog a fair amount.

That may not happen this week.

I am in Copenhagen tomorrow for a meeting on the Fair Tax Mark - which the Danish government is keen to encourage there, as it seems an increasing number are across Europe.

Wednesday sees me in debate with Sainsbury Management Fellows on the future of the taxation of intellectual property.

And Thursday and Friday are the annual Tax Justice Network conference at City University.

In between all that there is a mighty lot of other work to do and a nook to write (the Joy of Tax is making rapid progress again with the aim of having it out this year).

Blogging may be a bit limited.

Unless things happen, that is. And they do....
