

Job part done

I sent the final chapter of the Joy of Tax to my publisher yesterday afternoon. After years of this being a title in need of a book it's finally been written.

Of course, now comes several weeks of intense editing (I am sure). But it feels good to have, at long last, worked through the arguments in the depth I wanted.

Planned publication date is November 19. Hard work will be needed to get there, not least by my publishers, but right now I have promised myself the rest of this morning off writing.
