

Why has @fcablog blocked me?

For several years possibly the most persistent abuse of me on Twitter, and the second most persistent abuse on a blog, has come from the anonymous chartered accountant who writes the FCA Blog, where it would appear I am easily the most popular subject.

Then I discovered that I have been blocked from reading that author's twitter account today:

Might that have something to do with my having named the blog's author by what I think to be his first name in a tweet this morning?

Or is that just a coincidence?

Maybe the author might like to comment?
