

Financial power?

It's just been drawn to my attention that Accountancy Age think I am 35th on the list of people with financial power in the UK, up ten on last year:

35 (45) Richard Murphy, founder, Tax Research UK

Tax campaigner and key influencer of Corbynomials, Murphy looks set to have another vocal year as many of his key ideas - first mooted on his blog - make the transition from pure political economic philosophy to reality.

Former KPMG man Murphy is adamant that the reality of Corbynomials is not just in the detail but is in a whole new way of looking at and seeing ways of doing business. As the chartered accountant boldly posits, Corbynomials "may not be the kick back to a past era as those searching for the neoliberal norm like to claim" but "is instead the beginning of something new". It's a brave soul that will bet against that assessment.

Me?

Vocal?

Surely not?
