I am aware that there are rumours that I work constantly, do not need sleep and have a twin to aid my productivity. None of these claims are actually true barring the fact I really do have a twin brother - who has not, as far as I can recall, ever done anything to aid my productivity, much as I love him.

So sometimes I need a day or two off. With the draft of Dirty Secrets out of the way that's happening, from tomorrow. I suspect that, as usual, it will not mean I stop blogging even if I down tools on just about everything else but moderation might be decidedly erratic. I offer no apology. My sons seem to have other plans on my time and I have every intention of succumbing, starting very soon.
