Yesterday I asked:

Where is the place in the world where the Big 4 seem most over-represented based on the number of people in the local population?

Full marks (and nothing else) to Phil Lanch who got it right. The answer was Bonaire, a part of the former Netherland Antilles.

The bottom ten are:

Iceland and Greenland make another Scandinavian exceptional appearance. The rest are remarkably more predictable. And so, now to your next starter for ten. What is the largest country, by population, without an office of the Big 4?
