

Fuck you

I posted a song by Lily Allen yesterday, which registered her protest about Trump. I had, however, already had another of her songs buzzing around in my head for a number of days when I came across yesterday's offering.

And in light of Trump's imposition of 'extreme vetting' I'm throwing caution to the wind. This song says what needs to be said - and yes, I like the obvious pleasure with which she says it, which is, maybe, why this version was top of the pile when I searched for it. All of us the right to say the same thing with the same verve and confidence in our own skin.

To Trump.

To Erdogan.

And to May when she snuggles up to them.

And if you're offended, I'm not apologising. The time for subtlety has gone.
