

The pain of Trump's tax reforms

Trump's administration has admitted that it will have problems driving through its planned corporate tax reforms this year. The cause? Its failure to deliver healthcare reform, which Trump's own party could not stomach.

Can you imagine the frustration? Having to continue to support healthcare to 25 million Americans is preventing a $300 billion a year tax bonanza for the largest US corporations. Can't those pesky people wanting to see a doctor on the cheap see just how unjust this all is? The pain for Google, Apple, Facebook, Microsoft and others must be almost too much to bear.
