I am so bored of hearing BBC journalists saying 'where will the money come from?' when discussing the DUP deal.

Out of thin air.

Like every penny the government spends.

Like every bank loan ever created came out of thin air.

Money is only made to be used.

Now there is a use and this money will be created by the Bank of England to be spent in to existence. And it will be recovered via additional tax paid.

That's how government works.

It really is time the BBC understood it.

And it is well overdue that its political correspondents did. Because their ignorance is becoming embarrassing.
