The Mail on Sunday may not be the favourite warm day read of all who visit this blog, but this opinion poll data from Survation (who have a good track record right now) that they published today is interesting and pretty much self-explanatory:

So, soft Brexit it quite emphatically is.

As, of course, people were led to believe was what was on offer a year ago.

So let's be clear that when Tory Eurosceptics talk of civil revolt if people do not get hard Brexit they are talking utter nonsense.
