

Funding the Future

Article URL

Published: January 12, 2026, 5:36 pm

I learned the word 'bloviate' yesterday. I have Jolyon Maugham to thank for it. He used it on Twitter.

Wikipedia offers the best definition I have found:

Bloviation is a style of empty, pompous political speech particularly associated with Ohio due to the term's popularisation by United States President Warren G. Harding, who, himself a master of the technique, described it as "the art of speaking for as long as the occasion warrants, and saying nothing".

If ever there was a word created for Theresa May then this was it. She bloviates like no one else on earth.

And she's been rumbled.