

Tax Research elsewhere

There's a curious feature of this blog, which is that if I write about tax no one much bothers to read it. Or, at least, they don't in anything like the numbers that read anything I write about the NHS, modern monetary theory or Scotland.

It's MMT that's being read the most at present, and not just here. Much of what I am writing is also appearing on Brave New Europe.

And I notice I'm also appearing in the US on Naked Capitalism, which is a site I check most days.

I make the point for two reasons. Both sites are worth checking anyway for their material, which always tends to be good. And, secondly, the material I publish is available for republication by anyone if done on a not for profit basis. If it's for any other purpose, please just ask.
