I broadcast several times yesterday. The subject was Amazon, and tax. Or, as I made it, Amazon and accounting.

Twice were for the BBC. Once I was the only guest. The second was BBC 5 Live, on the Stephen Nolan show. And when they phoned the first thing they said was that they had read my blog from yesterday on who I would share platforms with. When I was invited they could not tell me that. But they agreed to keep me posted. Which they also did.

The other guests were informed and representative. There was a good discussion.

Some said the BBC would not take note of what Rupert Read had said and I had reiterated.

I am not quite so sure. But it will require that people object to platform sharing with those presenting extreme views.
