

Jeremy Corbyn is adopting the Green New Deal

The Guardian has reported this morning that Jeremy Corbyn is expected to say today

There is no bigger threat facing humanity than climate change. We must lead by example. Our energy plans would make Britain the only developed country outside Scandinavia to be on track to meet our climate change obligations.

Our programme of investment and transformation to achieve a 60% reduction in emissions by 2030 will create over 400,000 skilled jobs, based here and on union rates, bringing skills and security to communities held back for too long.

I am not claiming credit (because I know who it is due to) but that does very much like the Green New Deal to me.

And it is spot on, and not just because I happen to already agree with it.
