

Questions for Danske Bankâ€™s ex CEO

Ask yourself a question. You open a bank in a country known to be attracting money launderers. Call it Estonia. You choose not to put in place appropriate controls over that bank. And then you are surprised it laundered â,¬200 billion?

Really?

I would suggest that the CEO of Danske Bank, who has resigned because he did such things, should not be surprised at all.

Except at being caught, maybe.
