I have just had breakfast with Arthur Laffer. You know of him: he's the creator of the Curve. And most amusing it was too. We agreed on a few things. One, in particular: that you can't do macro without understanding double entry.

We're debating later this morning in Paris. I confess this should be fun. I will post my speaking notes later today.

If I am distracted for a while, now you know why.
