I like this announcement on the Office for Budget Responsibility web site:

I am hoping the election does not change this: I presume it was already taken into account, and as a matter of fact the Office for Budget Responsibility has a legal duty to report twice a year, which would be nigh on impossible if it did not report next week.

I admit I did not think Robert Chote would do this. I am pleased he has. This may come to bite the Tory hand that has fed him.
