

A funding update

Published: January 18, 2026, 1:11 am

At the beginning of this year I mooted the possibility of an appeal for funding on this blog because at that time it was not apparent how the income that I had enjoyed from City, University of London to October 2019 might be replaced.

I have this morning published an update on my funding for my various activities. I am pleased to report that some grants have been won in the meantime, either in a personal capacity or through the Corporate Accountability Network, which in turn is employing me, and that I am as a consequence funded for the time being. As a result the idea of a funding appeal has been put on hold at this moment. However, I much appreciated all the offers of support provided when the idea was put forward.