Peter May has been assembling a page on the Tax Research wiki on resources on understanding money based on resources from the web:

The screenshot shows a wiki page titled "Understanding money: resources from the web". The page has a sidebar on the left with a "Pages" section containing a link to "Introduction to the Tax Research Wiki" and a "Categories" section with "Economics", "Society", "Money", and "Unassigned". The main content area has a title "Understanding money: resources from the web" and a sub-header "Introduction [edit]". Below the introduction, there is a list of articles and videos. The articles listed are: "A comprehensive look at the money system in an article by Mary Mellor of Northumbria University (2019)", "Neoliberalism has tricked us into believing a fairy tale about where money comes from", "Informative commentary on how Thomas Edison and Henry Ford got it right in 1921 (2020)", "Thomas Edison on Government Created Debt-Free Money", "A summary of the workings of the money system focussing principally on America put together by Geoff Coventry (2020)", "The basics of modern money", "A hard-hitting piece from former Australian journalist John Kelly (2019)", "A politician's guide to the question 'how are you going to pay for it?'", "An informative Twitter thread from Professor Stephanie Katon of Stony Brook University New York (2018)", "Government borrowing (debt) is not like private borrowing (debt)", "The Gower Initiative for Modern Money studies is a non-profit organisation challenging economic orthodoxy. The article is written by retired economist Ellis Wittingham (2018)", "On National Government Spending, Taxation, and Bank Lending in the United Kingdom", "Very amusing collection of the possible consequences of misunderstanding money (2020)", "Money Myths - Unless you frame yourself, others will frame you --- the media, your enemies, your competitors, your well-meaning friends. George Lakoff (2011) - a memo to Occupy Wall Street", "Mock congressional interview with the chairman of the Federal Reserve (US Central Bank) on money, debt and taxes by Warren Mosler (2010)", and "An interview with the Chairman". The videos listed are: "An excellent commentary on how money is created (2018)", "Renegade Inc' programme where Professor Richard Werner of Southampton University explains to David Buck, a City of London financier, how banks create money", "A less than 5 minute video by Professor Stephanie Katon of Stony Brook University New York investigating how government finds the money to pay for things (2020)", and "Finding the Money".
