

Funding the Future

Article URL

Published: January 12, 2026, 5:11 pm

From me on Twitter this morning:

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 1h

Most people in the UK control two massive carbon producing technologies. One is their boiler. The other a car. Unless we can decarbonise both our children's prospects are pretty grim

7 32 60

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 1h

It will be good news if Rebecca Long-Bailey's departure ends all talk of a Green Industrial Revolution. The change we need is not just about industry. And it's not revolution, but transformation. We need a Green New Deal for the whole of the economy and our society

10 11 39

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 2h

I hear of accountants planning to lay off staff. They don't think enough of their client businesses will survive to need accounts

3 8 14

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 2h

The thing I hate most at the moment is that it's still possible to feel some optimism, and I know that's utterly inappropriate. The shit is going to hit the fan

7 27 97

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 2h

Keir Starmer has suggested that maybe 3 million may be unemployed by this autumn as a result of coronavirus and the end of furlough schemes. I'll give him full marks for one thing: wild optimism. I think it could be double that. And we haven't heard his plan for dealing with it

7 30 42

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 2h

It was reported that in February Cummings said of letting coronavirus rip that "if that means some pensioners die, too bad". Looks like he's going to get his way

14 15

 Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 2h

Breakfast should be light-hearted in the Rayner / Long-Bailey flat this morning

3 6 40