To support some work I have been doing I wanted to check some data from the March 2020 budget. So I did a search for it, and found it's already been archived:

Budget 2020 (Archived)

The Chancellor of the Exchequer presented his Budget to Parliament on Wednesday 11 March 2020.

I stress that archiving is not uncommon: it is usually done to the budgets of previous governments. But this government is already consigning events from four months ago to the archives.

The process of rewriting history is clearly not being left to chance.
