I am not a big fan of Joe Biden, for all sorts of reasons. But I so want this to be right:

Right now, our model thinks Joe Biden is very likely to beat Donald Trump in the electoral college.

	Chance of winning the electoral college	Chance of winning the most votes	Predicted range of electoral college votes (270 to win)
 Joe Biden Democrat	around 7 in 8 or 87%	better than 19 in 20 or 98%	216-415
 Donald Trump Republican	around 1 in 8 or 12%	less than 1 in 20 or 2%	123-322

The probability of an electoral-college tie is <1%

Estimated electoral college votes

Our model is updated every day and combines state and national polls with economic indicators to predict a range of outcomes. The midpoint is the estimate of the electoral-college vote for each party on election day.

This Economist page looks to be worth following. This election matters. It's about democracy, and so much more than that even.
