The excluded: people are not going to take the devastat...

This video is fantastic.

And in political and economic terms both deeply worrying, and a portent of things to come.

Rishi Sunak got some things right with his various support schemes earlier this year.

As they now, supposedly, come to an end he is seemingly getting almost everything wrong and is determined to make an already bad situation very much worse.

But some were never helped in the first place, and are getting angry now, and rightly so. That pent up anger is apparent in this video and the government needs to take note: people are not going to take the devastation it is choosing to deliver lying down. Cummings may believe in destruction. The vast majority do not.
