

Apologies

Published: January 13, 2026, 3:33 am

I have to apologise: there is no video this morning.

I did the APPG meeting I mentioned yesterday and then knew it was time to tackle an issue that has been bugging me. That has been the appalling Wi-fi in my house since moving to true fibre broadband. The router supplied by BT was terrible. Fantastic speeds next to the hub disappeared completely once outside the room. A mesh network had to be installed.

Four bourse later, much of the time being spent on BT calls to secure the information to set up a new router that they forget to tell you when signing up for their service, I eventually got the new system running. It's actual installation was a doddle: it was getting into the line that took the time. But by the time the job was done it was just too late to turn the camera on.