About three weeks ago I announced that I would be producing an ebook based on the Twitter threads and blog posts written in recent months that explain how I view the economic crisis that we are in:

Money for nothing and my Tweets for free

I am pleased to say that the text for this is complete and has been proofread and is now heading off for layout.

The book has ten chapters and a new introduction and will come in at just over 30,000 words. Most have appeared here before. Only the introduction is wholly new, and only minimal editing has been applied to previously published work, to eliminate my inevitable typos, in the main.

I am hoping that the book will be out soon, published by a new Tax Research UK imprint called The Finance Press. The implications is that there may be more to come.
