

Funding the Future

Sunday morning thoughts

Published: January 13, 2026, 2:14 am

Thoughts from my Twitter account this morning:

Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 44m

So, David Cameron is morose. That's entirely because he did not ask the right questions about Greensill. Like he did not ask the right questions about austerity, or NHS reforms, or his attacks on the disabled and vulnerable in our society. They made many more people morose.

7

58

168

↑

...

Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 43m

Cronyism = corruption

7

67

165

↑

...

Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 37m

What did Cameron's first in PPE at Oxford give him? The arrogance to think he didn't have to check out connen. Like Lex Greensill. And George Osborne with regard austerity. And Andrew Lansley on NHS reforms. They all sold him bad ideas, and he seemed to learn nothing as a result.

7

21

76

↑

...

Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 14m

What are the lessons to be learned from David Cameron's career? Never trust a Tory? That the best PPE to come out of Oxford is not a degree? That sleeze is inbuilt into the Tory party? Or just that when a man seems stupid, he may well be? Here's looking at you Boris Johnson.

3

16

54

↑

...