

When there is no meetings of minds

Published: January 18, 2026, 3:14 am

The part of the independence debate that the Tories (and some others in England) will never get is this:

Richard Murphy @RichardJMurphy · 1h

...

A Union of nations is dependent upon a meeting of minds. Scotland (and Wales and Northern Ireland) and the southeast of England no longer share that meeting of minds. Their values and aspirations fundamentally differ. So there is no Union. And that is why the UK is over.

15

138

308

↑

...

Their arrogance prevents them from doing so.

Their belief that they have a right to impose their beliefs on others blinds them to reality.

And the result is the risk that their ignorance creates.